"Midsummer Music Festival" in Stern Grove, San Francisco will present four Sunday afternoon programs in July, each starting at 2 p.m., admission free. The programs:

July 7 — Lola Montes Spanish Dance Group.

July 14 — "Song of Norway," presented by Oakland Light Opera Association.

July 21 — San Francisco Symphony Orchestra with opera audition winners.

July 29 — "Mikado," presented by the Lamplighters.

Stern Grove is situated at 19th Avenue and Sloat Blvd.

See-Scapes

Lying on the dwindling table in front of the Carmel Craft Center the other day was an almost understandable abstract loosely surrounded by a frame. When we asked what its title was we were invited to name it; "Cathedral at Dusk" seemed applicable. Then, oh, then; perspicacious as always, we were informed that the "masterpiece" was an old hunk of cardboard which was being used by Fred Klepich on which to spray things.

Perhaps you saw it. Even now, it may be gracing your mantel. In which case you, too have (what was the word?) perspicacity.

Take Me Out to the (?)

Howard Baxter of the Village Pub (ex-Fumidor) was last week a tour guide on an exotic trip through Willie May's-land. Conducting a group of forty-two Carmel lovers of the abstract art of "swat", via bus, Howard saw them more or less safely through the freeway wilderness to the "Candlestick Point" game preserve.

The score was not mentioned but the bus driver was commended for his no-hit afternoon.

The Two Screw-driver Breakfast

Our listing of the many things asked us "Why Doesn't somebody Do Something About" seems to be gathering no moss. From this week's mail we have:

Carmel. . . no street numbers, no mail boxes, no trash cans, no sidewalks, no street lights, hazardous pedestrian crosswalks, no signs to indicate fire dept., police dept., or hospital. . .

Can't find a thing. . . motels advertise vacancies when there aren't any. . . confusion! Beach off limits to those wanting to swim. . . Poor service stations, inadequate driveways, inadequate signing. . . no coffee shops.

Full of rich people who won't spend a dime on any civic improvements. . . They trade at the discount house over in Monterey to save a penny!

Someone ought to put up a fence around Carmel and post a sign "TOURIST TRAP" OFF LIMITS!

Not even directional or information signs to aid motorists in finding their way out of the hidden area. . .

Also . . . Squirrels

Saucy Coons

Weak Tea

Ankle-wrenching sidewalks

Where is everybody early in the morning?

Where is everybody after ten at night?

Gossip gaggles in the middle of the street (break it up, girls)

Ball games in the middle of the street (Gee, mister, was that your windshield?)

Poison Oak

Phew! The Point

Cadillacs take up too much room

Station wagons take up too much room

You think it's a parking space and find there's a little car in it

No Chamber of Commerce

Too commercial

Don't suppress yourselves. This is more fun than your friendly neighborhood brain bunger, (and cheaper, too) Also, feel free to tell us why Nobody Does Anything about these items.

Meeting Change

The attention of members of the MONTEREY PENINSULA VOLUNTEER SERVICES is called to a change in the date of the general meeting. Instead of meeting the usual first Friday of the month, due to the Fourth of July holiday, they will meet at 10 a.m. on Friday 12 July at the USO in Monterey.

Say Cheese — And Win

The work of many of the best lensmen of California will be on display at the Placer County Fair, Roseville 24-28 July, in the annual photographic contest.

$230 in cash awards and gold, silver, and bronze medals in both black and white photography and color slides will be awarded.

Entries will be accepted from anyone living in California north of the Los Angeles County line.

Works will be judged by well known photographers.

No entries will be accepted after midnight on 13 July, and judging will take place when the jury gathers 20 July.

Entry blanks may be obtained by writing to the Placer County Fair, Box 710, Roseville. Catalogues of jury selections will be mailed to all entrants.

The Emile Norman Gallery moved to its new location in Carmel the first of this month. The gallery is located on Mission Street between 5th and 6th and is open daily. . . .

Bernstein Concert

Tickets are now on sale at box office locations throughout Northern California for the Labor Day weekend concert by Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic at the Monterey County Fairgrounds on Saturday, 31 August. According to a spokesman for Dana Attractions, "thousands of seats remain in all price categories," despite an unusually heavy mail order response. The Monterey concert is the only West Coast appearance by Bernstein and the 106-man Philharmonic outside of Los Angeles. Tickets are available in San Francisco at the Downtown Center Box Office, 325 Mason Street, and at the following locations on the Monterey Peninsula: Apinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado Street in Monterey; Central Box Office, 6th and Dolores, in Carmel; the Gadsby Music Co., 342 Main Street, in Salinas; and in Santa Cruz at Allen-Smith Pianos and Organs, 129 Water Street.

Art in Squaw Valley

The University of California Extension will present a studio program for painters, art students and art teachers 8-19 July at Squaw Valley. The two-week course will utilize the spectacular Tahoe area as both artistic stimulus and subject matter.

The theme of the program is "The Painter Seeks New Materials." Participants will concentrate on landscape painting and on exploration of new artistic concepts and methods involving use of found objects.

San Francisco painter, Leonard Breger will act as artist in residence for the studio course. He will guide participants' individual work and will lecture on the philosophy and techniques of assemblage and collage.

Further information about the Squaw Valley studio is available from Liberal Arts Department, University of California, Extension, Berkeley 4, TH 5-6000, ext. 4143.

BANG!

The Fourth of July certainly isn't what it used to be.

WHAM!

It used to be a day to do something about.

KABOOM!

There were speeches, of course. BANGITY-BANG-BANG!

But they weren't quite as apologetic as they are now.

CRACK-CRACK-CRACK!

Because other things were far more important.

WHOOOOSH—BANG! Ahh!

Like, firecrackers.

SNAP!

And rockets.

WHEEEEEEEE—BOOM!

And Roman Candles.

FSHHHHH—PLOOF! Ohhhhh.

To small boys, Independence was the emulation of an act, not the contemplation of its obscure meanings—a blazing in the sky and a thunder on the ground, affirming in an elemental, noisy excitement the time of courage and wild will of freedom.

BOOM!

The turkey never taught a small boy to be thankful, and not even grown-ups like work as the result of Labor Day.

But the firecracker was a catechism of Independence a young boy could understand.

BANG! (Oh, say, I can see...)

In those days, independence did not seem so extraordinarily precarious. Perhaps it does now because we have nothing much left except the mock-solemn and clumsy ceremony of words.

"AND FURTHERMORE, FELA AMERICANS....."

Words are not as safe — and seldom as sane — as a firecracker. It doesn't take long to find out what a firecracker will do, but there is never any way of being sure about the outcome of words. I would sooner trust a firecracker.

BLAM!

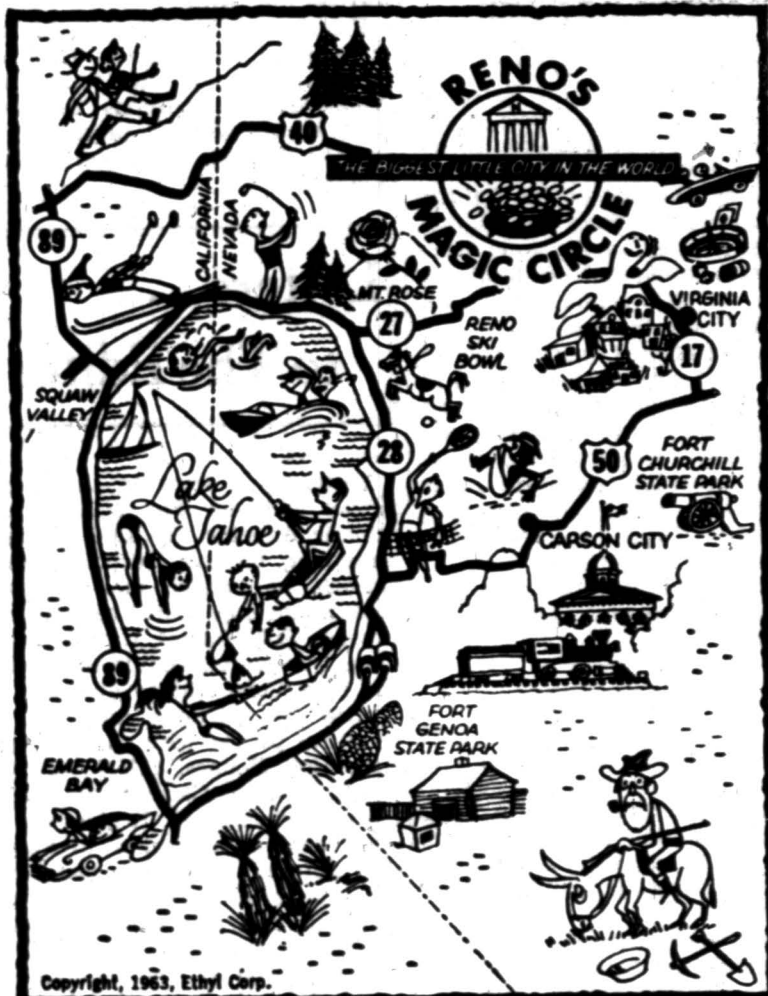

Carmelites have not, however, forgotten the symbol of the Fourth — though the meaning may have become as obscure here as elsewhere.

On the beach tonight more Carmelites will gather than at any other time of the year.

They will turn the long arc of sand into a sort of ritual cauldron, fuming with acrid smoke, bubbling, popping, whistling and spouting fountains of bronzy glitter. Bright tips of green and red and blue fire will blaze through the opaque smoke. Like spectres moving through dreams, people will cluster in places around the color, weave through the smoke and dance in the nightmare debauchery of rank smell, lurid color and soft puffing and snuffling noises.

At least once during the night a child will dash at the waves with a sparkler alight. Clamoring in his ears will be secret sounds: ("Oh, say, can you see" ... BANG! ... "By the Dawn's Early Light" ... BOOM! ... "What so Proudly We Hail" ... WHAM! ... "By the Twilight's Last Glimmering" ... KABOOMITYBOOOOOOM!

Young defiance will unleash his arm as he flings the blazing wire toward the waves. Up it will soar

By Edward Collier

Reno, where fun is serious business, likes to be known as "the biggest little city in the world." First famed as a divorce capital, citizens now claim a cupid role of thousands of marriages. The main stem glitters with flashing signs of plush hostilities and the gambling casinos with forests of slot machines where visitors let their hair down. But "across the tracks" Virginia Street blooms with a shopping center, nice homes and the dignified campus of the University of Nevada, which looks down over this city with a split personality.

The Magic Circle auto tour turns south to Virginia City, revived ghost town and site of the fabulous Comstock Lode. Gaudy emporiums such as the "Bucket of Blood" and "Gold Nugget" are a reminder of gold and silver bonanza days; still living is the Territorial Enterprise, boom day newspaper on which Samuel L. Clemens first signed himself "Mark Twain." Boot Hill epitaphs recall violent days when men died young.

Top attraction in Nevada's little capital of Carson City is the State Museum. Rockhounds delight in the Fluorescent Room where rock samples may be viewed in "black light" which brings out the colors of the different minerals.

Circling west, the route offers a stunning view of Lake Tahoe, inland sea of pebbled blue glass suspended high in an ancient volcanic crater. The road leads through Cave Rock tunnels and returns along the California side, past jewel-like Emerald Bay and Squaw Valley, where the last winter Olympics were held.

"Give it to Daddy, dear!"

through the dark while eyes bright with impudence and hope attend its glittering parabola. And when the black and restless waves extinguish wire, hope and the quick light in his eyes, he will turn away.

If you are nearby, take his empty and unfulfilled hand, before he wanders away into the night and try to explain what has happened.

ART

S. F. Museums

Contemporary Japanese sumi paintings and abstract oil paintings by the California artist, James Grant, will be featured at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park. The Sumi showing opens 1 July and the Grant exhibit, 11 July.

Pottery by Gertrude and Otto Natzler, at the San Francisco Museum of Art, starting 2 July and "100 Pots" by Shoji Hamada give an unusual underscoring to this art form in July. Hamada is an internationally known Japanese folk potter.

Photographs by Alfred Stieglitz and industrial design awards of the Western Electronics Show and Convention are added features at the Museum of Art, the Stieglitz showing through 21 July and the Wescon display, from 18 July.

The California Palace of the Legion of Honor: "Old Master Drawings from Chatsworth," more than 100 drawings by Rembrandt, Rubens, Durer, Holbein and Van Dyck, will be shown starting 18 July.

"Life on Other Worlds" will be the summer show at the Morrison Planetarium, starting 2 July and ending 2 Sept. The program of this summer spectacular presents the latest ideas about the possibility of life on other planets in the solar system.

Kiwanis Club

The CARMEL KIWANIS CLUB recently enjoyed a film on fire safety construction in schools lent by Fire Chief Elmer Anderson of Salinas. Actual scenes by non professional actors emphasized the importance of fire resistant doors, no transoms, sprinkler systems, alarms, extra exits. A book, "OPERATION SCHOOL BURNING," is available from the L. A. Fire Dept., which had made the study and the picture.

And Existentialism

If you are a devotee of things from Alan Watts to Zen Buddhism then you will be interested in the Asilomar program on "Existentialism and Zen: cross-currents in art and culture," to be sponsored by University of California Extension 14 through 20 July. Treating these subjects as they apply to trends in art, literature, psychotherapy, theology and, possibly, people, accessories to the lectures will be films, poetry readings, recorded dramas and exploration of key works involved in these philosophies.

Personalities scheduled to appear are Rollo May, New York psychoanalyst and author; Herbert Blau, co-director of the San Francisco Actor's Workshop; Professor Stanley Cavell, Harvard University philosopher; Kai-Yu Hsu, chairman of the San Francisco State College foreign language department and Jon Covell, visiting faculty member at Kyoto University, Japan, authority on Zen art and architecture.

Special enrollment arrangements are extended to commuting Peninsula residents. Further information may be obtained through Liberal Arts Department, University of California Extension, Berkeley 4.

IN CALIFORNIA

BEER IS A NATURAL

From nature's light grain comes sparkling, light beer... California's traditional beverage of moderation—it's light, sparkling, delicious.

And naturally, the Brewing Industry in California is proud of the more than ten million tax dollars it contributes to the state of California each year—money that helps support our schools, our hospitals and our parks. In California, beer belongs—enjoy it.

Where There's Life...

By Andre Hope

Due to a best selling little book we are all fairly well acquainted with what happiness is; a warm puppy, of course—unless you don't happen to be an animal lover, in which case it would be a cold beer. But what freedom is? A nice thought upon which to think this Thursday. For instance: freedom is being able to eat kosher herring on Friday if you are Catholic. Is being able to vote "no" . . . Is campaigning fervently for your favorite politician and after he has won giving him a very bad time for his entire term of office. . . Is being able to fight simultaneously with your boss, your union, your wife and the telephone company. It is also your wife's ability to turn you out to the doghouse and the telephone company's to turn you into a necklace of numbers. . . It is choosing your own way of life and profession and making a howling flop of it without any dire consequences other than those to your own pride. . . It is to be a non-stop thinker. . . It is the ability to change anything if you have the will and care enough to (attention young fathers). . . It is to develop your own taste and have at hand a wide choice of things with which to satisfy it. . . It is turning the dial. . . It is letters to the editor. It is an answered call for help. . . It is being able to answer a call for help. . . It is not being afraid. It is to laugh, even to yourself without the source being questioned. . . It is to have something to laugh about. . . It is the privilege to use the one faculty which elevates man from the other animals; the power to reason. . . It is to kneel anytime in any place for any purpose, except before another human. . . It's steak on Sunday and spaghetti on Friday, with maybe a little chop suey on Wednesday. . . It's leave my seals — mountain lions — whooping cranes — squirrels alone. It's opening the gate to one's own garden and closing the door to one's own home. . . It's ballet or baseball, Bach or Brueck; you takes your own choice. It's availability. . . It is to carry

Pops Concert

This Sunday, 7 July, at 3:00 p.m., the first Forest Theatre "Pops" concert will be presented by a professional orchestra under the direction of John Gosling.

Among the selections to be heard are: "Lohengrin," the introduction to Act III; Bizet's Carmen Suite No. 1; numbers by Strauss, Rubenstein, Leroy Anderson, Eric Coates and selections from "My Fair Lady." The program will be rebroadcast the following Saturday by Station KRML. Admission is free to the public. For the information of out-of-town guests, the theater is located on Mountain View Avenue and Santa Rita in Carmel.

Under the auspices of the Carmel Arts Commission, this first concert will be sponsored by the Musicians' Union. The Union has also offered to bear half the expenses of future concerts, pending the approval of an additional amount voted by the City Council. Those interested in personal donations are asked to send them to Mrs. Walter Jennings, Forest Theatre "Pops" concerts, P. O. Box 3851, Carmel.

HURRAH FOR OUR SIDE

The Carmel Merchants' softball team was the winner of the Tri-County Tournament as of 2 July. 17 other teams were in the competition. Complete details in next issue.

your own banner mentally, vocally, morally or manually and your neighbor's right to do the same; may the best man win. . . It's a cascade of vitriol poured on the revenuers while paying your taxes, secretly knowing that you're really investing in you. . . It's privacy. . . It's sprawling in the sun or howling at the moon without curfew or having to produce papers to prove that you are allowed to. . . It is not a gift; it is bought and paid and fought for every day. . . It is worth more than a silver spoon to a baby. . . It is the most valuable tool you have in your work and handled correctly it will never grow old, only more keen. . . It is to live for, but not without. . . It is only as old as the history of the valiant spirit.

Wish it a happy birthday and a long life. And a happy Independence day to you all!

Salvation Army Talk

Mrs. Leslie Erickson, great granddaughter of General William Booth who founded the Salvation Army, spoke on the history of the famous service organization at the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Monterey Division of the California Retired Teachers' Association.

Chet Bentley, at the same meeting, was re-elected to head the group for the coming year, and presided over the session.

Also re-elected were Theo H. Odell, first vice president; Miss M. Augusta DeForest, financial secretary; Mrs. Gilbert I. Rhodes, corresponding secretary Mrs. C. A. Davies, recording secretary James A. Walker, legislative chairman, and Miss Grace V. Widemann, membership chairman.

New officer installed was Mrs. H. H. Bartenstein, second vice president.

Fire Department

At 4:33 a.m., Wednesday, July 3, 21 volunteer firemen and all equipment responded to a general alarm at 2nd and Lobos. A fence fire was blazing at the home of John Guzik, cause not determined. There was, fortunately, little damage.

The Department has answered 22 ambulance calls and 19 fire calls in the past month. Most disastrous of the latter was the complete destruction of the Richard Colburn home in Carmel Meadows. Losses were estimated at $50,000.

Among The Pines . . .

New Nest Feathers

Holders of Cal-Vet home loans will be able to acquire improvement loans on a liberalized basis after July 1, according to an announcement made today by California Director of Veterans Affairs Joseph M. Farber.

"Actually," said Farber, "this is a further liberalization of the already liberal improvement loan policy followed by our Division of Farm and Home Purchases, and is aimed at allowing the veteran contract holders to improve their living conditions."

The policy has been changed so that there will be no restriction on the improvements themselves, as long as they are used for improvement of the primary structure for which the original loan was made.

In his announcement, Farber explained that although the former policy on improvement loans was based solely on family need, the new one is based on convenience and the contract holder's ability to meet the obligation.

Information on the liberalized improvement loan policy can be had at the office of the Division of Farm and Home Purchases, Department of Veterans Affairs, Sacramento, California.

Culture & Crullers

The third annual Book Fair will be held at All Saints' Parish Hall, Lincoln & 9th Carmel, on July 11th from 10 a.m. — 4 p.m., sponsored by St. Bede's Library Guild for the benefit of the Parish Library.

Coffee will be available from 10-11:30 a.m. The Bishop Kip School mothers will serve luncheon from 11:30-2 p.m. for a nominal cost. There will be tea and cake from 2:30 to closing time. Baby sitters will be on hand to assure no babies being under foot.

Japanese Table Party

Teen-agers Linda Shepard and Kathy Kimball of Carmel are co-hostesses at a pre-Fourth of July beach party for (roughly) thirty guests thusly enabling their friends to spend the holiday with their families.

The menu will include hot dogs, potato salad, potato chips, cokes, watermelon and a discreet amount of sand. The manner of serving is particularly ingenious, involving the "Japanese table." A trench is dug on the beach, a low sand table constructed in the center, covered with a cloth and the guests sit around the edges. Barring wind or cave-in this sounds like a most adaptable idea.

Anyone for "Alice"?

Friday, 5 July, there will be try-outs at the Forest Theatre, Carmel, 2-4 p.m. for "Alice in Wonderland". Auditions for the play, which will be presented 9 and 10 August, are open to all children.

Letters . . . to The Editor

Dear Sirs,

Yesterday I went to the High School and saw Mr. Miller, our athletic director. He said he had something for me. Surprised and curious, he handed me a heavy manila envelope. On the outside it read; Bob Holmes, Carmel Pine Cone. I wondered what in the world the Pine Cone had to give me. I opened the package and saw a beautiful plaque with the inscription; Bob Holmes, C.H.S., All C. C.A.L. Baseball, Carmel Pine Cone. I was flabbergasted. It gives me a great deal of assurance to know that not only the team members are interested in their team. Not only was this a nice gesture, but it showed that the townspeople, especially you at The Pine Cone, cared about the team that lost 21 straight games last season.

The plaque, or the gesture, goes much deeper than something to hang on the wall. I take this gesture as something not to be shrugged off lightly.

I am heartwarmed to know that somebody besides the team cares. I can only tell you; thank you for your much appreciated concern.

Sincerely,
Bob Holmes

Editor, Pine Cone:

Might I suggest — the older teen-agers suggest time between summer jobs to cleaning up our trash-cornered beaches? They did a fine job some time ago and who knows? They might land a paying job by doing this for our lovely town.

Mr. X

THE PHILADELPHIA STORY

By Philip Barry

Produced and Directed by Sally Hughes Church
WHITE OAKS SUMMER THEATRE
Thursday, 20 June through Sunday, 14 July

THE CAST

Tracy Lord	Karen Kondan	James Ellingwood
Dinah Lord	Toni Brandt	Macaulay (Mike) Connor
Margaret Lord		Bob Talmage
Alexander (Sandy) Lord	Mary-Ellen Thompson	George Kittredge
Thomas	Wayne Douglas	Milo Christopher
Elizabeth (Liz) Embrie	Paul Tischer	Franci Antoncich
		C. K. Dexter Haven
	Marty McFarland	Richard Darrow
William (Uncle Willie) Tracy		Jim Stein

The curtain rises on the solarium of Seth Lord's country home near Philadelphia. The handsome setting, executed by Jack Roush and lovingly lighted by Katherine M. Hartzell certainly was meant for a diamond. It contained, instead, an ice cube; very clear, completely contained within the body of the piece, smooth to the eye and almost totally lacking in facets.

Miss Church expertly set to words and motions, an evening of pleasantries and light comedy. Somehow, I feel, neither she nor her cast quite grasped Mr. Barry's satirical intentions. The stuffed shirts were all present and accounted for, but were more stroked than poked. With a few exceptions, no one seemed to have any perception of the characters they were supposed to portray. They came to the party to entertain, but were unsure as to just what their turns were. The laughs were there (Mr. Barry wrote them into the script), nothing much else was done about them.

The general effect of the male members of the cast, though three were supposed to have rougeish tendencies and the fourth was cast as a middle-sized heel, was that of sophomores from good families trying to live it up like seniors from good families. I except James Ellingwood as Uncle Willy, who finally found out what position he was playing on the team and made a very "good show" of it.

The ladies of the cast made a fiercer swing at the "ball" and a few connected. The fact that Karen Kondan was somewhat miscast as Tracy Lord, probably had something to do with her inability to understand the character.

Tracy was revealed as an ingenu with a good, if misplaced heart, which Tracy was not; lacking was the self-contained, opinionated, assured, militant virgin (though ex-edly married) which Tracy exactly was. It is no wonder that the slightly tipsy semi-seduction scene, a highlight of the piece, became a teenagers romp while the parents are upstairs in bed, when one feels that the lady is more upholding her mental shoulder straps than her beliefs in a way of life. Described by her ex-husband as "yar" she seemed more definitely "square."

By far the outstanding actress was Mary-Ellen Thompson as Tracy's mother, Margaret. She sparkled, snapped, crackled and popped throughout the evening and knew exactly what she was doing and for what reason. Toni Brandt as the teenage Dinah Lord was as much at home as though she had been in her own living room and gave the overall impression that she was indeed that, a nice touch. It is always hard to make something out of the maid bit; statuesque Franci Antoncich managed. When she was on stage there was no doubt about it. She was on. Marty McFarland as the tweedy encased girl reporter with a lace valentine heart, felt that standing askew with eyes a-squint and elbows akimbo, was enough to establish her as the brittle sophist-towit. T'warn't. That lace kept showing all the time.

The wardrobe by Eleanor Stoltz contributed to the general atmosphere. It was nicely fitted to the various players but entirely unsuited to the characters.

I have not attempted to reconstruct the actual story-line as it has been on public display to almost every generation since its inception; including the screened musical comedy version, in which this cast might perhaps have been more at home.

To end at the beginning, if you are neither concerned nor acquainted with the script and its motives, for an evening of pleasantries and light comedy it has many advantages over TV. A.H.

"SKETCHBOOK REVUE"

Featuring Don Freeman

Presented by Ralph Geddis and Francois Martin

TANTAMOUNT THEATRE

Because of the fame of Mr. Freeman, author, illustrator and caricaturist, we thought it would be of interest to our readers to present an interview with him concurrent with this review. The thought proved to be delightfully unnecessary. In the course of his show that weekend past, not only did he present a program of his works, but told his own story as he went, both audibly and illustratively, utilizing his own musical backgrounds as the mood moved. Armed with tape recorder, chalks, charcoals and capacious easel he presented not only a chronicle of his works but a witty entwining of his life and the people it encompassed. His off-hand and sometimes almost hesitant manner of speaking combined with the swift and masterful handling of his art provided an excellent contrast. The artists in the audience must have had the feeling of being select members of a seminar, while the rest of us had the impression of being invited guests in a rather relaxed studio. Black lighting was used effectively to highlight many of the drawings.

He began, as he ended, with a sketch of himself as a little boy industriously tooting a horn into the bell of an old victrola ("Father had a strong weakness for jazz"). As he developed his life's theme, he pictured himself as well and the evolution of his work with sketches of the subway; New York harbor (the lighting here taking it from day to night) ending with the lights on the water and the nostalgic sounding of the buoy. His love of the theatre was demonstrated with caricatures of celebrities as Caruso, Hepburn, and Orson Welles; with a hilarious aside depicting the reaction of a lady who had the traditional entree-act orangeade inadvertently plummeted down her plunging, backless gown. Greenwich Village was sketched in from noon to moon ending with the glowing eyes of the ever present back fence tabby (shades of "Archie and Mehitabel"). Freeman's impressions of famous artists were also included from the tombs of the Pharoahs through the Mona Lisa, and Goya's MaJa to a quite dramatic sketch of a Japanese lady in the traditional style and glowing with color.

In line with his predilection for music, particularly jazz, there was a fond, if satiric, vision of Gershwin and one of my favorites of the evening, "Fats" Waller playing in some distant dive, when as the black light was employed, Freeman added a glowing ash to the pianist's cigar and sent the smoke pluming into the murk with wildly dancing figures in the background. Very "moving" pictures. As a finale, caricatures were drawn of two members of the audience, Victor Rossen and Barbara Tripp.

The response throughout was exactly what he chose to elicit. I suspect this musician turned artist retains a great deal of Pied Piper. After the performance, the work of the night was distributed to the customers.

It is a shame that this show could not have been held over. It is also a credit to Geddis and Martin that the children's matinee was also successful. They continue to conceive rather sophisticated productions which manage to charm adults as well as children by some sort of theatrical sleight of hand.

Coming Attractions

Opening 29 June and playing every other Saturday through 7 September at 2:30 p.m., the Fantasy Players will present "Greensleeves' Magic." This exciting adventure play for children tells the story of a kingdom cursed by a wicked duchess who forbids all laughing, singing and dancing. Also involved, naturally, are beautiful princesses and proud kings and queens; the hero, of course, Greensleeves, who breaks the evil spell.

After the production ends, the children are invited to mingle and talk with all the characters who will still be in full costume. Always a traveling production, this will be the first year that the piece has been presented at the Carmel Valley Theatre.

The first offering of the concert series will be presented Wednesday, 3 July, and Wednesday, 10 July. "Love Scenes from Musical Theatre" is the theme, involving excerpts from opera, light opera and modern Broadway shows in concert form.

This is a musical montage of romantic song from the 18th Century to the present; from "Don Giovanni" to "West Side Story,"

"How to Succeed in Business" and "Orpheus in the Underworld."

The Great Securities Mystery . . .

Complete Report of Congressional Investigation

Mr. Vanik. Let me ask one other question that I overlooked. When you left your vault every day, as you were leaving would you be subject to any examination or scrutiny by anyone else in the bank?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. You could walk out of the vault with almost anything?

Mr. Bertram. With half of the vault in my pocket.

Mr. Vanik. And no one would have stopped you or questioned you?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. There wasn't anybody or wasn't anybody's duty to question you or ask you questions?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. You people in the vault were so highly trusted that you could have taken any collateral out in your pocket and walked away?

Mr. Scott. How could he do that with the other custodian present?

Mr. Vanik. He could have helped you, couldn't he?

Mr. Talcott. I am interested to know how you would get away with anything. It is a pretty sizable vault, and I don't think you should try to exaggerate. This is a serious thing. Not only your reputation, but the reputation of the Federal Reserve System, and all of the officers of the bank is at stake. This is no place for exaggeration.

I think you are just kidding when you say you could take half of the bank out in your hip pocket.

Mr. Bertram. It was just something to answer.

Mr. Vanik. What is your answer then? My question is — and let's get a question and an answer to my question — when you got through with your day's work every day, you and your associate in the vault, did you have to submit to any examination or screening as you left the vault and left the bank?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. You could walk out of the vault, and no one would stop you?

Mr. Bertram. That is correct.

Mr. Vanik. Did you sign out anywhere?

Mr. Bertram. Yes; you signed the vault journal.

Mr. Vanik. That you had left?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Vanik. And from that point on until the time you got to the street, you didn't have to stop and submit to any examination or interrogation or inspection?

Mr. Bertram. No.

Mr. Vanik. So you could walk right out of the bank?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Talcott. After you left the vault, it would be very difficult for you to get into any other vault?

Mr. Bertram. Impossible.

Mr. Talcott. So the only thing you could have taken out of the bank is something from the vault you were working in during the day?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Talcott. How would you get anything out of the vault with the other custodian present?

Mr. Bertram. I would have to be pretty sly of hand, because we watch each other.

Mr. Talcott. His job is to watch you, and your job to watch him?

Mr. Bertram. Yes.

Mr. Talcott. Do you think your colleague ever got out of the vault with anything?

Mr. Bertram. I am positive he did not.

Another troubling notion is the Bank's conclusion that if the securities were inadvertently discarded by the custodian they must have been burned. We know that the trash inspection and retention regulations were sometimes overlooked. Moreover, the Bank officials concede that trash stored by the janitor could have been reached by numerous people. Is it not then possible that someone could have picked the securities out of the trash, had they accidentally been discarded?

In advancing these alternative hypotheses, we are not attempting to substitute our investigative judgment for that of the principals. But we are very much concerned about the Bank's resort to the "burning" theory as a basis for not informing the public. As we see it, this theory is merely one of several purely inferential conclusions. We are struck by the fact that, in seizing upon the theory that the May 31 transfer was the time and occasion of the loss, they chose the only one that permits the conclusion (a) that the securities were burned and (b) that there is therefore no risk to the public of the securities falling into the hands of a holder in due course. On this basis, it was possible to rationalize the secrecy followed up to the time of the Examiner story of March 27. The theory is a self-serving one that permitted cover up without the conscience pangs that should otherwise accompany it.

E. FAILURE TO INFORM BANKS AND PUBLIC ENTAILS UNNECESSARY RISK OF LOSS

By adopting a theory that permitted it to keep the fact of the loss from the public, and ignoring the possibility that the certificates might have been outside the vault, the Federal Reserve Board and the Bank are in the position of having covered up a minor negligence and thereby committing a major one — failure to protect the public interest.

If the securities were outside the Bank, they involved — and still do involve — a definite risk of loss to the taxpayer. Prompt notice to the public, and to the banking community in particular, was important because it would have put prospective purchasers on notice and thus reduced appreciably the likelihood of some innocent purchaser coming into possession of them and thereby obtaining a legal right to cash them.

Law of negotiable instruments. The danger of lost or stolen certificates being cashed derives from the operation of negotiable instruments of law. The law provides in general that a bona fide purchaser of such securities for value takes them free and clear of any defense that the obligor (in this case the Treasury Department) may have on such grounds as unlawful conversion in the chain of title. Consequently, the U.S. Treasury Department would be obligated to honor these certificates if presented for payment unless the following factors were present:

(a) Proof that the holder did not pay for them;

(b) That he bought them with knowledge that the seller did not have good title; or

(c) Proof that he should have known that the seller lacked good title had he exercised normal care.

Legally, a person presenting the certificates to the Treasury Department would be either a bona fide purchaser or not. A bona fide purchaser is defined in the law as a purchaser for value who takes bearer securities in good faith and without notice of any adverse claim. Except for certain situations not pertinent here, a purchaser for value without notice of the Government's defense takes the securities free of all defenses. And, if he presents them for payment, the Government will be liable thereon. His legal status is that of a "holder in due course," under negotiable instruments law as it exists in the United States and most other commercially developed countries of the world and as a holder in due course, he can present securities for payment long after the maturity date without in any way weakening his claim.

Even if bearer securities were presented by someone who is not a bona fide purchaser but who has received them through transfer from one who has the rights of a bona fide purchaser, he would be a holder in due course and the Government would be liable. As to the possibility that the certificates will ultimately be presented by persons claiming the rights of a bona fide purchaser, it is obvious that if the certificates were not destroyed, they are either lost or stolen, and quite conceivably a finder or converter could have effected a transfer, especially through accomplices. Hong Kong and Switzerland were mentioned as localities where this might be feasible. Once done, the securities would have been freely negotiable up to May 15, 1963. If the Treasury has to make full payment to a claimant it will charge the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco as the responsible custodian. The Federal Reserve banks would deduct this amount from the annual payments made to the Treasury Department. Hence, the taxpayer would be the loser.

The liability of the insurance company is limited to $500,000. While the officer of the insurer, the Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, testified that the company would be clearly liable for this amount if the securities fell into the hands of a holder in due course, it is clear that the balance of $7 million would fall upon the Federal Reserve banks.

Treasury policy

Mr. Swan testified that he was persuaded in part to maintain silence by the Treasury regulations affecting bearer certificates. When he and his associates considered the question of whether or not to circularize the banks and Government securities dealers, advising them of the serial numbers, he was advised by the Treasury Department that this should not be done in their opinion. His testimony on the subject is as follows:

To avoid impairing the negotiability of the public debt, the Treasury since 1867 has consistently refused to accept such notices of loss from others and thought that a consistent policy should be followed in this case. Some understanding of the reasons underlying this decision may be gained from the following excerpts from Treasury Circular No. 300, "General Regulations With Respect to U.S. Securities":

"Sec. 306.95. Responsibility of Treasury Department — (a) General. The Treasury Department assumes no responsibility for the protection of the interest of any person in securities not in his possession, and neither the Department nor any of its agencies will accept notice of any claim or of pending judicial proceedings by any such person, except as specifically provided in these regulations. . . . These limitations are based on the fact that the ready marketability of the securities, especially bearer securities, depends in part upon the promptness and freedom with which transactions therein may be effected.

"(b) Bearer securities. Bearer securities comprise more than 90 percent of the outstanding marketable Government obligations, and transactions therein are concentrated in the 12 Federal Reserve banks and their branches, and the Treasury Department. The volume of these transactions is so great that the necessity of consulting lists of bearer securities against which caveats (stoppages) may be requested as the result of loss, theft, or destruction before maturity would cause extensive de-

Since investigations of the incident pointed to the conclusion that the certificates involved would never be presented for payment, we decided that the better course was to delay further consideration of a public statement until after the date the certificates matured (May 15, 1963). There appeared to be no public purpose to be served by an earlier statement.

There may be reasons for a Treasury Department policy of "no notice" in the case of smaller denomination securities which are unquestionably more widely held than are the larger denominations. The negotiability of these smaller denominations might be impaired were all the banks, financial institutions, and dealers put on notice of the loss and therefore required at their peril to check securities offered to them against lists of serial numbers of wrongfully held or lost bonds.

In the case of million-dollar certificates, however, notification would not be any burden. There are not so many sellers of such securities as to make it difficult for would-be purchasers to check a relatively few serial numbers. In any case, ordinary prudence would require that a purchaser make inquiry when buying large certificates from strangers. Under present Treasury policy, it would appear that a bank does not have much incentive to ask questions as would be the case if it were on notice as to the serial numbers of any million-dollar certificates known to be lost or wrongfully possessed. Certainly publication reduces the chance of loss, as admitted by the Bank's counsel in response to the chairman's inquiry as to whether or not newspaper notice would have any effect in a faraway locality.

Mr. Reuss. Let me ask counsel, whether, assuming public announcement had been made, and if the Hong Kong paper printed it, and it was in all the news dispatches, and a Hong Kong banker thereafter claimed he was a holder in due course, there would be in your opinion an issue to go to the jury as to whether he was in fact a holder in due course; is that correct?

Mr. Scott. Definitely.

Mr. Talcott. If he said he didn't read the papers, that would end it?

Mr. Scott. Not necessarily. I think we would ask him how much he paid for them.

Mr. Talcott. I mean insofar as public notice.

Mr. Scott. Yes.

Mr. Vanik. A story in a Hong Kong newspaper would be better than no story at all?

Mr. Scott. Yes.

Actual possibility of sale
The Federal Reserve, the Secret Service, and the Treasury Department place heavy reliance on the notion that anyone in wrongful possession of such certificates would have difficulty in selling them. We are not convinced. Such securities could be used as collateral for business loans either here or abroad. Or, they might be negotiated by a wrongful holder in complicity with a shady dealer—a possibility enhanced by the existence, in certain parts of the world, of banks that evince a marked lack of zeal for asking any questions of depositors.

It would be naive to assume that a wrongful possessor would attempt to sell million-dollar U.S. securities by walking into a strange bank in New York or San Francisco. But it is equally naive and shortsighted to assume that the securities could not be converted into gain in more imaginative ways. Hence, notice to the banking community and the public generally was clearly required at the time of the loss in order to place prospective purchasers on notice and thereby protect the U.S. taxpayer.

F. MANNER IN WHICH FEDERAL RESERVE TOLD PUBLIC OF LOSS

Mr. Ed Montgomery, the newspaper writer who broke the story in the securities loss, voluntarily testified at the hearing. He stated that he first learned of the loss last September, but was reluctant to divulge the source of his information. Inasmuch as he showed commendable public spirit in testifying as an invitee and waived any protection he might have had as a newsman, the committee did not press him.

Mr. Hanson, in his testimony, reported a hearsay story that Montgomery learned of the loss through the conversation of a bank employee in a public bar. Montgomery did indicate that his story was "confirmed" in Washington, but unfortunately he was unwilling to discuss the subject with any more precision than that. His testimony, in part, was as follows:

Mr. Talcott. I thought maybe you hadn't completed your anatomy discussion.

We are interested in how this story was obtained. There is a history that there is intentional leaking of information to the press these days in Washington, and apparently there is some leaking of information by the press in San Francisco. Would you mind telling us how you got the information?

Mr. Montgomery. Well, may I say this, with regard to any leaking in Washington. This story, sir, was written before I ever took a plane to Washington. I took a plane Sunday night, the 24th, if I am not mistaken. The story had been written, but there were certain changes made after I arrived in Washington and finally obtain the confirmation that I thought was necessary.

Mr. Vanik. I would like to ask this. You say you did speak to someone in the Federal Government who was in a position to know, and that confirmed the missing point you had in the story?

Mr. Montgomery. I didn't have any missing points. All I was seeking was a confirmation of the information that I had, that the Treasury Department had been notified of the disappearance of the securities.

Mr. Vanik. That is all you had to confirm?

Mr. Montgomery. I wanted it from Washington and not hearsay at this level.

Mr. Talcott. Were you able to confirm any of the other facts you stated here in Washington?

Mr. Montgomery. I was able to confirm the fact that the loss had been reported in Washington, that they had knowledge of it.

Federal Reserve officials indicated that the Board of Governors learned on Monday, March 25, that Mr. Stark, staff member of this committee, had noticed the brief entry about the San Francisco securities loss when reviewing the 1962 minutes in New York. This information was reported to the Board from the New York bank. Montgomery testified that he was in Washington from March 25 through March 29, and that part of his time was spent in confirming the story. During that same period, the Board of Governors and the presidents of the Federal Reserve banks held an open market committee meeting. Montgomery testified that he did not receive confirmation from any Board officials. The Examiner story broke on the morning of March 27, followed by the Bank's press release and news conference.

RECOMMENDATIONS Improvement in custodial procedure

Bank authorities have already corrected several defects in custodial practices by revising the operating manual, as related above, and advise that they are exercising greater care to avoid the problem of peak workloads in the vault. However, the supervisory deficiencies brought to light during the investigation cannot be corrected by adding new manual provisions. The problem requires participation of officers, department heads, and section chiefs, to guarantee adequate supervision of operations at all levels and to assure frequent inspections in order to minimize lapses in employee performance.

Further, in view of the large amounts of securities held by the Bank for custody and safekeeping—over $11 billion at last count—Bank officers must take a direct hand in assuring that vault security provisions are adequate. We consider the absence of a vault log or any other record of people who enter the vault as a defect that should be corrected without delay.

More central direction

Beyond these obvious considerations is the more pervasive need for direction from the Board of Governors. In the relatively limited management category of securities custodial practices that came into focus during this investigation, we find much diversity in practice among the 12 banks and their branches. For example, some use envelopes for storing securities; others do not. Some use perforated envelopes. In one case, the face of discarded envelopes is kept permanently as a record. In other instances, an officer or trusted employee must check any security transfer.

Under the present mode of operation, the Examining Division of the Board of Governors does not have general clearance authority or control over the regulatory practices followed in the 12 banks and their branches. It has no general manual for use throughout the System. Operating procedure is determined locally. As a result, managerial personnel at the several banks do not have the benefit of the knowledge and experience of their counterparts in the others. In our view, coordination of management practices is an obvious and desirable function for the Board to perform. It should be their job to promulgate written administrative standards to guide the district banks.

External audit

It is disturbing to be reminded as we were during the investigation that neither the Federal Reserve Board nor the district banks are subject to an outside audit; that this vast central banking system to which the Congress had delegated vital money powers, audits itself. While the Board audits the Federal Reserve banks annually, we do not regard the practice as similar to the kind of external audit by the General Accounting Office required for other independent agencies, as well as agencies of the executive branch.

The experience of this subcommittee gives no ground for satisfaction with present arrangements. STATEMENT OF LEO SCHIMMEL OF THE GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE

Hon. Henry S. Reuss, Chairman, Special Committee Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives.

Dear Mr. Chairman: Pursuant to a request from the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives, April 9, 1963, to the Comptroller General of the United States, I was designated to assist your staff to investigate the mysterious disappearance of $7.5 million in U.S. Government securities from the vault of the Federal Reserve bank in San Francisco. As previously agreed upon with the committee staff, for the purpose of this assignment I was to be considered a member of the committee staff rather than a representative of the General Accounting Office. Mr. Kenneth Hunter of the San Francisco regional office of the General Accounting Office was also assigned to the committee staff on the same basis and assisted us in our investigation.

On April 17, 1963, I accompanied Mr. John Stark, professional staff member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, to San Francisco. On April 18 and 19, we interviewed various officials and

The Great Mystery . . .

Service, and obtained a general familiarity with the bank's custodial and related accounting and internal auditing procedures.

We found no direct evidence explaining the cause of the disappearance of the securities through destruction or otherwise. Information developed in our investigation was presented to the chairman of the subcommittee for use in preparing for the public hearing held at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco on April 22, 1963. The hearings were recorded by a public reporting service and when printed will include testimony of bank officials explaining the history of the securities prior to their disappearance, events surrounding their disappearance, vault and related accounting procedures, and the basis for the conclusion of Federal Reserve officials that the securities were destroyed by burning.

Because Federal Reserve officials contended that inadvertence of vault personnel led to the probable destruction of the missing securities and because limited time precluded a comprehensive analysis of all aspects of the bank's custodial activities, our investigation concentrated primarily on procedures and controls for safeguarding securities stored within the vault.

Regarding the handling of securities stored within the vault for safekeeping, we noted that at the time of the disappearance of the securities, the bank's written procedures did not include provisions pertaining to the transfer of securities to a new securities envelope on occasions such as when posting space on an old envelope is filled.

(1) The bank's manual of procedures did not include a written instruction that when making transfers of securities between envelopes the custodian should count the securities and verify the total with the total on the new envelope which, in turn, was carried forward from the old envelope. A retired custodian testified that he performed the counting operation only about 50 percent of the time.

(2) The bank's manual of procedures did not include an instruction that the securities should be placed immediately in the new envelope.

(3) The bank's manual of procedures did not include an instruction that all envelopes should be slit along the sides, opened, and inspected to determine that all contents had been removed. It was testified that this is a requirement throughout the bank and was normally followed.

These procedures were subsequently incorporated into the operating manual of the bank. We were informed that they were adopted immediately after discovery of the loss, although the manual was not revised until March 7, 1963.

The bank's procedures have been further strengthened through the adoption of the following new requirements:

(1) The envelopes used for containing securities now have holes punched in them, so spaced as to provide a visual check that all securities have been removed.

(2) When envelopes are no longer needed they are retained in the vault until completion of the next internal audit, after which they are discarded.

(3) A new form (LLM 168) has been adopted. The custodian is required to list all securities by issue and denomination on this form, verify the total thereon with the totals appearing on the old and new envelopes, and file the form, with the securities, in the new envelope where it is retained until the envelope is discarded.

(4) Vault custodians are required to examine wastepaper taken from their wastebaskets before it is removed by janitors. We were informed that the trash from the vault is now emptied onto a dropcloth on the floor of the vault and thoroughly inspected by the custodians before it is given to the janitors.

The foregoing revisions in written procedures were adopted by the bank in accordance with its conclusion that the missing securities were accidentally destroyed by burning, any relationship between the absence of written detailed procedures and the disappearance of the securities must remain a matter of conjecture.

In our investigation we received full cooperation from bank officials. Mr. Stark and I returned to Washington, D.C., April 23, 1963.

Sincerely yours,

LEO SCHIMMEL

INDIVIDUAL VIEWS OF HON. BURT L. TALCOTT

I join with my two colleagues only in the presentation of the true unadulterated and unembellished facts pertaining to the disappearance of the subject certificates.

The best factual statement concerning the incident is contained in a summary report of the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, dated April 1, 1963, and entitled "Apparent Inadvertent Destruction of Certain Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness at Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco." This summary is exhibit C of our committee hearing (p. 9), and a copy is attached hereto as an appendix to my report.

Very little, perhaps nothing, was ascertained in San Francisco which was not already known or could have been more easily discovered in Washington. We saw the inside of the vault (not unlike other bank vaults), an incinerator (rather specialized), some used currency (little different from new), and some bold bullion; we also met some capable and dedicated banking officials.

The prior investigations, by the bank, its auditors, the Treasury Department, the Secret Service, were as thorough as could reasonably be required or expected considering the seriousness of the nature and the amount of the possible loss. No reasonable investigation was omitted. All action was thoroughly deliberated by a number of competent officials at every juncture with the best interests of the individual taxpayer and of the continued unimpeded negotiability of our Treasury certificates as primary considerations. The Bank's timely investigation was professional, devoid of "politics" or any attempt to "protect" (or harm) any individual — simply to locate the certificates, to reconstruct the true facts and, with what appeared to me conscientious and earnest purpose, to avoid a similar future occurrence and to perfect the custodial functions of the bank. The Employee Fidelity Insurance carrier ($500,000 policy) was satisfied with the investigation conducted prior to the appointment of our committee.

In view of the final recommendation of the majority report relative to external audit of the Federal Reserve banks, it is of interest to note that 2 weeks prior to the hearing in San Francisco, Washington Financial Reports for April 8, 1963, carried the following statement:

There are indications that Representative Reuss, Democrat of Wisconsin, who is chairman of the special subcommittee, is not as satisfied as Talcott with the FRB's explanation. The incident could lead to demands that the Federal Reserve banks submit to audit by Congress or the General Accounting Office. (Italics in original.)

It should be known that in addition to our three-member committee, one staff member and one special accountant from the General Accounting Office in Washington went to San Francisco. Another accountant from the San Francisco office of the General Accounting Office was detailed to our committee. I trust that this investigation will not be a prelude to an attempt to impose General Accounting Office auditing upon the historical independence of the Federal Reserve System.

The Great Mystery . . .

The enviable, unmatched record of the bank in superlative sustained service, without loss, is not mentioned, yet this is the most dramatic finding of our committee.

It should be remembered that admission to the corridor leading to the vault was guarded by a number of trusted armed guards; the entrance to the vault was similarly guarded; two combination locks (no two persons knowing both) were required to enter the vault; only the custodians and senior officers and auditors were permitted in the vault; all valuable papers were doubly receipted, in and out; the custodians worked in "double custody," each required to face and watch each other at all times; each was separately and individually responsible for any loss from their vault; the janitors do not enter the vaults; no one person has both keys; various other visual, physical, and recording checks were made of each transaction. All trash of the bank was incinerated in the bank facilities; none was taken to a public dump. The incineration was done in an extremely careful manner, quite similar to the incineration of used currency.

The disappearance of certificates of such large denomination presents an open sesame for much concern, drama, and conjecture. Such an incident gives conscientious bank officials ulcers; the imaginative and inquisitive press, dramatic and exciting stories; and affords any antagonist of the Federal Reserve bank, or any bank or banker, a wide-open field in which to operate. We should be careful not to contribute unduly to any of these potentialities.

The answer is evidentially simple inadvertent incineration; but, because the proof is circumstantial rather than direct, the Federal Reserve System (and, by implication, every bank, banker, or sympathizer) may be subject to persistent attack.

I, of course, could not, and do not, conclude absolutely that the certificates were not stolen. The only evidence that the certificates were not stolen is that they are missing. The circumstantial evidence is overwhelmingly clear that they were not stolen. And although there is a possibility that there may be a loss, the likelihood of any loss to anyone is exceedingly remote. It is probable that even if the certificates were stolen there would nevertheless be no loss to anyone. Obviously, unless the original certificates are produced we cannot be absolutely certain concerning their disappearance. Absolute certainty is rare in human affairs. Proof beyond reasonable doubt is more likely — and is the degree of proof more often required in human affairs.

Everyone who has studied or investigated this incident, excepting the majority (and, in the event of a theft, the thieves) has agreed that the most probable explanation of the disappearance of the certificates is inadvertent incineration. Inasmuch as I do not have superior knowledge I cannot disagree with the experts.

The certificates were due May 15, 1963. No interest accrues thereafter. Coupons worth $243,750 have not been cashed. The certificates have not been presented for payment. The passage of time without presentment fortifies the hypothesis of inadvertent incineration.

Banks are operated by humans; humans err, some more frequently and seriously than others and for different reasons; so long as we have banks we shall have errors. An attempt to avoid all possible error (inadvertently or intentional) would be prohibitive. The expense to the taxpayers, the encumbrance to the operation of the bank, and the impediment to the negotiability of our Federal securities must be considered and evaluated against both the reasonable possibility of prospective loss and the history of no losses. There would seem to me to be a point at which the law of diminishing returns would apply. It may be less expensive, less cumbersome, more safe and more wholesome to trust people — to employ capable persons who can be trusted.

Although the Federal Reserve System is a creature of Congress, and Congress should thoroughly scrutinize its operation and provide it with legislative guidelines, the System was wisely designed by Congress to be somewhat independent of government and politics (certainly politics). It is my hope this investigation will not discredit the Federal Reserve System, or "grease the skids" for more Federal or political control of the total banking system which, in my opinion, at this time would be unimaginably bad and unwise. If we are not discerning, such attack will certainly result in additional Federal expenditures (whether useful or not) and in greater encumbrances upon, and regulations of, the Federal Reserve System and in damaging impediments to the negotiability of our Federal debt instruments, without commensurate improvement in the custodial procedures of the bank.

We, and the bank, can and should learn from every mistake. The Federal Reserve bank, prior to any knowledge by our committee, on its own volition made some minor modification in its procedures, "manualized" some unwritten practices, perforated "peepholes" in the vault windows, ordered the folders to be stored for a period of time.

The bank, and its officials, should be commended for their immediate attempts to improve and tighten their custodial practices and procedures. The improvements were indicated and will be beneficial. The improvements and modifications should not be construed to indicate that the prior practices were inadequate (practically or reasonably). All possibility of every single error cannot be obviated by fiat or manual. Some reliance on human behavior must remain. We simply do not have unlimited funds to use to obviate every single risk of possible loss.

Many thieves have devised systems to steal from banks. No matter what the precaution, some thief will devise a new system.

The fact that a single disappearance occurred does not necessarily prove or even indicate that the whole system is or was bad or inadequate.

Instead of "double custody," the traditional system of custodial security, "triple custody" or "quadruple custody" could be imposed. But would "quadruple custody" be twice as secure; would "quadruple custody" absolutely prevent four people from colluding with an officer or janitor (or both) to secrete away some currency? I think not. The additional security (to whatever degree or amount you would assess it) would cost considerably more. Would the certain great additional cost justify the questionable diminution of the possibility of such future disappearance, particularly when there has been no loss to anyone? I think not.

These changes will probably not avoid a similar mistake; they will do little more than transfer the blame for any similar future mistake upon the custodian rather than the whole establishment.

I would prefer to leave to the experts any suggestions for improvement in custodial security and management, however, if a lay suggestion is acceptable, I would like to see a bank install and experiment with a paper-shredding machine in the vault and require that no paper be permitted out of the vault except by double receipting (for valuable paper) or by shredding (for all other material, including trash). This would eliminate any possibility of loss (as distinguished from "disappearance") through inadvertent misplacement or inadvertent inclusion with trash and thereby permitting a valuable paper to come, without recordation, into the possession of a janitor, garbage man, officer, or auditor. Refinements of the shredding procedure could include, among others, that the custodian who discards does not shred and that the intake of the shredder be in the vault and the exhaust would be outside the vault. The shredded material would be incinerated in the premises of the bank.

The "investigation" convinced me that the Federal Reserve System is expertly operated by competent, conscientious men who are concerned for the individual taxpayer, depositor, and investor. These men impress me as dedicated bankers who discharge their important duties in an unexcelled fiduciary manner. Their record against loss is superlative. The bank and its officers should be commended generally for their exceptional record and particularly for their expert, professional handling of this regrettable human error.

There was a requirement for posting dollar total of securities transferred from a retired to a new envelope — in fact, a space was provided for this purpose on the printed envelope and the custodian was required to initial the line to verify compliance.

The most dramatic improvements to evolve from this "shocking" incident was the perforation of "peepholes" in the envelopes for instant inspection of the envelope innards.

To obviate such an incident ever occurring again, it was proposed to save all the used envelopes so that in the event of another disappearance another search of the trash could be made by a superior officer. Fortunately a compromise, in the interest of economy of storage space more necessary for certificates, currency, and bullion, the Bank now saves the discarded envelopes until an auditor releases them. We won't need a new bank building quite so soon under the compromise regulation.

The administration of waste, according to the majority, was sloppy and loose. And yet in 1962 alone the Federal Reserve banks handled over 10 million pieces of negotiable Government securities with a face value in excess of over $605 billion. I only wish that every bank and custodial institution in America could boast such a loose administration."

The observation that the custodians were overworked is subjective. I think the most lazy and indolent worker in private industry would welcome the opportunity to be so "overworked." I did not see any employee in the Bank who was overworked. The majority even complains that the custodians are overburdened because, during a 2- or 3-day semiannual audit, the auditors come into the vault. This is almost analogous to complaining that the prison guards are overburdened when more officers are employed.

The claim of "weak supervision" is easily made but not substantive. Would the supervision be stronger if a senior officer was required to sit in the vault all day? I think not.

The committee places great emphasis on Mr. Bertram's statement that he violated a certain practice half the time — this is used to "prove" "weak supervision." But Mr. Bertram also testified that he could walk off with half the contents of the vault. Both statements were patently, and probably equally, false.

Bertram was a very unsatisfactory witness. He could not remember; he exaggerated grossly; he contradicted himself.

Requirements for traction caused new rubber formulas to be developed with the hardness of the rubber approaching gum rubber, as on erasers.

The hardness index of street tires used to run over 80. Now an average tire for racing is in the low 60s. The new Dunlops for racing are in the 50s, and some of our tire recappers have velvet-soft rubber in 40 hardness. These treads have forced rapid changes in major tire development. A whole new division of Goodyear tires has sprung from their low profile, 150 mph., Blue Streak racing tire. It's wider-than-normal tread is also lower in diameter so that more rubber on the ground will not cause change of gear ratios. Their recent tire was a T-1, but hardnesses have softened so quickly that today the newest tire is a T-6!

Firestone is producing a great, wide new tire with soft rubber for the stock racing cars, and a few German tires are seeking our market, too. We have tires and recap treads which we can wear out completely in one hour of intensive racing, and the average sticky tire run at Sebring in the 12-hour race was just hard enough to last the two hours between gas fillings!

Brakes, of course, must be better. But they must also now be lighter and cooler. First, the disc brake was heavy, so it went in-board, was mounted as sprung weight next to the differential center — even in the center up front with axles to the wheel. This decreased the unsprung weight and kept more things out of the airstream on racing cars. Then, when heat got too great with increased power and stopping, brakes began to move back out into the windstream where they could be cooled.

Nowadays, they are tucked inside the 6" wide, 13" rims, and have deflectors to get extra air.

You see no more wire wheels, as alloys are stronger and can also transfer heat away more quickly. You see no chrome (of course) because the plating process makes metal brittle and robs strength. You find independent rear suspension popular, because this allows the heavy center section of the differential to become sprung weight, and this helps the road holding.

Some advanced racing cars even invert the shock absorbers, as the piston and plunger then are unsprung, and the heavy cylinder and oil are sprung weight. Oh yes, the details to which engineers go are minute, and the results, of course, have been very far reaching. Some prominent automotive developers give most of the credit for the great strides in performance and handling these past three years to the tire and the wheel research and development.

Now, don't feel too bad when

Carmel Art Association

A new show will open at the Carmel Art Association Gallery 3 July. A memorial exhibit, it will be in honor of Henrietta Shore. New works in painting and sculpture by the membership will be on view in the other rooms. Chairman of the hanging committee is Ethlyn Crouch.

Beginner's Luck

Winning her first time in competition at the Miss California Pageant boat races, Santa Cruz, 24 June was "Pipp." She was purchased five weeks ago by Peter Stuber of the Mark Thomas Inn, who was also her captain. In the crew were Inge Stuber of the Pine Inn and Pat and Pamela Patterson. This was also Inge's initiation as a sailor. Inge is delighted with her husband's new hobby as he previously raced stock cars. "It's so much cleaner," was her demure quote. The boat's name derives from the first initials of captain and crew.

J. van Amerongen's beautiful "Baroness" was also in competition.

It's Cold in Texas

Airman Third Class Anthony J. Belleci of Carmel Valley, is being reassigned to Francis E. Warren AFB, Wyo., following his graduation from the United States Air Force technical training course for refrigeration specialists at Sheppard AFB, Tex.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neno A. Belleci of Middle Canyon Road, Carmel Valley. He is a graduate of Carmel High School and attended Monterey Peninsula College.

Our Fame Goes Before Us

The United Nations delegates who flew from Monterey airport on 21 June at 1:40 p.m. and were picketed by the same individuals who had been present at their arrival on 19 June and at the luncheon given by Mrs. Robert Stanton in Carmel Valley on Thursday, were appalled to see below the mas they circled the Santa Barbara airport a marching crowd carrying picket signs. A groan went up in the airplane. But when the wording on the signs could be read, the delegates stood up and clapped and cheered — the signs read: "Welcome United Nations!" and "We Love You!"

Part of the pity of it all is that our visitors, here to exclaim, not to be defamed, did not truly have a chance to meet and mingle with the majority of our community, other than their good hosts (the unusually usual ones) wherein they might have found friends, students, well-wishers and others

Readin'

As is usual with the Harrison Memorial Library in summer time, the reading program for children begins as soon as school is out. This year it is called "Knighthood: A Quest for Good Books." Like knights of old, the club member earns his promotions through deeds of derring-do, namely, the reading of good books. He first becomes a page, next a squire, and after that he begins to earn the accoutrements of knighthood. After he has earned his shield, his lance, his armor, he becomes a knight.

The club is open to all children of reading age who wish to join, and enrollment is already in progress. Younger children may enjoy the weekly summer story hours which will be held at 10 o'clock in the morning on Saturdays.

Feathered Weathermen

If you are interested in seeing the Apache Rain Dance, Eagle Dance, Hoop Dance, Horsetail Dance or other native ceremonies they will be on view at Mission San Antonio, near the town of Jolon, 25 miles west of King City, 4 to 7 July. The dances, performed by Indians from the Arizona desert, who have recently returned from a European tour, will be embellished with war paint, tribal masks, brilliant costumes and assorted whoops and wiggles (guaranteed to bring up a storm). The performances, which should be of special interest to photographers, will be presented in authentic and rarely viewed ritual as they were for centuries prior to the Spanish invasion of the old Southwest.

Times for the spectacle are 11 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2 p.m., 3:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. Free to the public.

Honors

Scholarships received by Monterey Peninsula College students this spring have been augmented by two, Dr. Frederick K. Huber, MPC president, announced.

Carole Miyamoto, Monterey sophomore and education major, who graduated with the class of 1963 last Thursday, has been designated winner of a $1500 Monterey Peninsula College Educational Foundation scholarship by the college scholarship committee. The scholarship was made possible by a gift to the foundation by Fred Hollenbeck of Carmel. Dr. Louis Balsam, MPC professor emeritus, was responsible for the initiation of the fund.

First winner of the June Lockhart Lindsay Drama Foundation award of $100 is Val Risely, MPC drama major who recently starred in the Circle Theatre production of "A Taste of Honey." She fulfills the requirement of the foundation (which is now being established) that the scholarship be given a freshman drama student who will return to MPC as a sophomore in the fall.

Sponsor of the award is June Lockhart, motion picture and TV star.

Two other MPC scholarships not previously announced were the Associated Students awards of $150 each to the man and woman graduate who had provided "outstanding service to the college." One of these was received by Ronald Barker of Carmel.

LAW IN ACTION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

No man can serve two masters, so the saying goes, especially in government. Government employers cannot do business for the government with firms in which they have a financial stake. Thus no city purchasing officer can deal with a firm which he owns, no matter how fair and honest the contract may be.

The rule sometimes makes it hard to get the best people in government work. Joe Biggs, a dairyman, was a useful man for the school board because of his wide business experience. So the people elected him.

Yet in any school milk or butter purchases, Biggs had to pass on his own firm's bids. Since Biggs could not afford to lose this business, he resigned, and the school lost a valued officer.

The laws against "conflicts of interest" are broad. Under the law an officer (and sometimes a person who works under him) "cannot be permitted to place himself in any situation where his personal interest will conflict with his faithful performance of his duty."

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

NOTE—If you have a personal matter which seems similar in nature to the cases mentioned in this column, or have need for any other legal guidance, it is suggested that you consult your lawyer for further advice.

One board of supervisors contracted with the Ajax Road Builders which rented big road machinery from Jones & Smith Rentals. Board member Smith, voted on the contract. The court called this a conflict of interest, and cancelled the contract.

In another case a school board member was also an insurance broker for the Safety Bus Company. The Board contracted with Safety Bus to haul students but made it increase its insurance as the student passengers increased in number. The Board member could and did get more insurance commissions. Again the court blew the whistle. The board member quit office.

As a rule, where an official's interests are remote, there is less likelihood of a challenge if he discloses his interest and takes no part in getting the contract or voting on it.

The Sur Coast

By ELIZABETH FULLER JONES

In a setting of a beautiful redwood grove, on a gently sloping property, carpeted with a lush growth of native and primitive plants, on Highway One, at River Village, Big Sur is the Pfeiffer Pony Riding Academy. The Riding Academy is beginning its second summer in Big Sur and is open every afternoon. Appointment can be made for morning riding and/or lessons by calling Big Sur 2783.

The Academy, owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. John Pfeiffer, members of the well-known, Sur country pioneer family, came into being because of their love of children and because of their fondness for Shetland ponies. A few years ago, Mrs. Pfeiffer wanted a pony 'just for a pet, to love and care for'. Before long the Pfeiffer's became owners of more ponies, until now they have eighteen, a few are little colts, a few months old, and stand not much higher than a collie or shepherd dog. Chetmont, a handsome pinto stallion will lie down on command. All of the ponies are gentle, in fact they stay about their masters and visitors, seeking attention, or perhaps looking for children to ride them over the lovely trails.

Often than the summer season, Elkhorn District, near Moss Landing where Mr. Pfeiffer is associated with the P. G. & E. Moss Landing Power Plant.

Fourth of July week-end visitors in Big Sur are Mr. William (Billy) Post and his bride, the former Susan Pryor of Santa Barbara. Mr. and Mrs. Post were married on June 8 at the Little Chapel Around the Corner in Las Vegas. There for the wedding were Billy's parents, Sur Country pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. William Post, Sr. and her sister and husband Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fleenor. Mrs. Fleenor (Mary Post) served as Matron of Honor and Hugh Fleenor, Best Man. The wedding party attended the midnight show at the Stardust nightclub and the wedding ceremony took place at 3:00 in the morning. The Posts live at Goleta, near Santa Barbara where Billy is an electronic technician for the State Highway Department.

The Philip Johnsons of Big Sur have had as recent guests, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Muelrath of Hermosa Beach. The Muelrath's own properties in Big Sur and are frequent visitors here. Mr. Muelrath is station coordinator for United Air Lines, stationed at the Los Angeles International Airport. The Johnsons and Muelraths became friends many years ago when Mrs. Johnson was associated with United Air Lines, San Francisco in the position of training new employees in sales and reservations.

The Muelrath's just returned from a trip to Spain where they

Festival of Arts

The San Jose State College Festival of Arts which commenced 24 June and will run through 2 August has announced a program which will include painting, sculpture, ceramics, music, outstanding films and lectures.

Among the first events will be Lucien Laporte, cellist, 2 July, 8:15 p.m. at the Music Building Concert Hall; Art exhibit from the East Bay Art Association, 3-24 July, art gallery in the Art Building; "The Lavender Hill Mob" (film) 3 July, 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall; Louis Filler, lecture, "The Anxious Years," 9 July, 9:30 a.m. in the Concert Hall; Faculty Trio Concert, 9 July, 8:15 p.m., Concert Hall; art lecture, "The Tightening Nerve and the Sharpening Sense: The Preparation for Modern Art," Richard G. Tansey, Lecture Room 183, Art Building.

Information on further events may be had by contacting the San Jose State College Festival of Arts.

visited with an interesting family that lives in a remote village about sixty miles from Madrid. The Muelrath's were the second Americans that had ever visited the little settlement. The first American was a G. I. during the Second World War. The Muelrath's became acquainted with the family they visited, through their mutual interest in bull-fighting. They began a correspondence and their friendship and interest in each others families grew. Their recent meeting was a very heart-warming experience for all of them.

Beginning July 1 and continuing through the fire season (throughout the summer and early fall months) all persons entering National Forest Lands are required to obtain a "Restricted Area Permit." This applies not only to those entering the Forest for an overnight, or longer camping trip, but also applies to those who are on a one day outing. Also required is a campfire permit. These permits may be obtained from any United States Forest Service station. In the Big Sur, secure permit from the Guard Station, on Highway One. Permits are also issued at Pacific Valley, Arroyo Seco, Chews Ridge, Carmel River Station (at Los Padres Dam) and in the upper Palo Colorado Canyon, at Bottchers Gap.

At the Big Sur Guard Station, of the United States Forest Service, Stephen Goetz, Fire Crew Foreman, and crew of six men, are on an around-the-clock alert to guard the more than 91,000 acres of Los Padres National Forest under their immediate jurisdiction. Mr. Goetz and his staff are highly trained in the business of meeting emergencies that may arise of forest lands, which include fire control, searching for lost persons, rescue work, etc.

In moving into the summer season which brings with it a heavy use of National Forest Lands, the members of the Forest Service urge you to do everything within your power to prevent fires. Obtain a camp fire permit, read the rules contained therein, and then abide by them. Smoke only in a safe place. Smoking areas and no smoking areas, are carefully posted. If a fire is discovered, do take immediate steps to bring it under control, but if this is impossible, report it at once to the nearest Forest officer and then render any assistance you can to control it. Use and enjoy the abundant water supplies, but be careful to protect from pollution all sources of water.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will again hold a hearing, July 29, 1963 at the Court-house in Salinas, for the application of specific zoning, to protect the scenic beauty of the more than seventy miles of coastline from Malpaso Creek to the San Luis Obispo County Lines. Also to be considered at this hearing is the forming of a "scenic conservation" zone for protection of scenic highway areas.

ORGANIZATIONS

The Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross has re-elected August H. Johnson, manager of the local branch of the Bank of America, as chairman. Re-elected with Johnson were Carl Bolsholm, first vice chairman; David Wisnom, second vice chairman; F. K. Duhring, treasurer; and Mrs. Rogers P. Parratt, secretary.

New directors are Katherine Witter (nursing services); George Yates (nominating committee) and Mrs. Warren Edwards (purchases and supplies).

Directors re-elected were Mrs. H. V. Alward, Dr. Margaret Barnes, Charles Kinsolving, Mrs. Blair McDonald, Charles A. Stewart, Mrs. Charles Strosnider, Carl Vetter, Mrs. Donald B. Walker and Mrs. Charles Whiteley.

Miss Helen Heavey and Dr. Tom O. Morris were reappointed as financial and medical advisers, respectively.

Joan Baez Benefit

An overflow crowd, which necessitated piping music into two additional class rooms at Sunset School auditorium 22, June attended the Joan Baez concert in aid of the Carmel Point Cooperative Nursery School. Mrs. Rosa (Ephraim) Doner, director of the school, said that at latest estimate over $2,000 in donations had resulted from the event.

There is absolutely no reason to review Miss Baez' performance. The young Big Sur folk singer presented herself as always natural, unassuming, at ease and singing beautifully. As an extra fillip to the evening, she invited Roger Perkins, folk singer and instrumental teacher for a San Francisco music foundation, to sing and play with her. Mr. Perkins was an unexpected arrival only an hour or so before the beginning of the concert and was warmly received by the audience.

Following the performance, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Emrich were hosts at a reception for Joan, her friends, the parents of the students at the school and their guests. One visitor was Meg Secombe, member of a family well known to Carmel, her father having been minister of All Saints' Episcopal Church some years ago.

Sidelights — The mothers of the school who served as ushers not only donated the price of their tickets, but resold them and added to their contributions. We trust that the scalpers, reportedly reselling tickets at quite sizable increases outside the door, were also as generous in theirs.

Man from Otter Space

An exhibit of sea otter photographs by Karl W. Kenyon, Biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, will be shown at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History during the month of July. The museum is located at the corner of Forest and Central Avenues in Pacific Grove. The pictures may be viewed from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily except Monday.

The otter himself, in person, may also be seen carnivaling in the sea along Ocean View Blvd. in Pacific Grove. Special guest appearances are also made off Cypress Point, Pebble Beach; Point Lobos State Park, South of Carmel and most any other spot where his favorite hors d'oeuvre, abalone may be plentiful.

These happy chaps, who are the comedians of the wet-footed mammal world, number 20,000 to 30,000 in Alaskan waters and some 700 on our Peninsula.

In case one becomes overwhelmed with their charms it is well to be reminded that they are protected by State and Federal regulations; so it is inadvisable (as well as illegal) to take them home for permanent pets.

S.P.C.A. Answers

In reply to a letter sent us regarding the giving or selling of animals by the Animal Shelter or pound, we have received this information from Majorie Fontana, one of the humane officers of the Monterey County S.P.C.A.

According to Article XI, Section 1, "This Society prohibits any of its officers, employees, agents or deputies from allowing any living stray, lost or confiscated dogs or cats, which have become public property, or in its custody, to be used for experimental purposes; or to turn over, with or without remuneration, directly or by indirect ways or means, any living dog, cat or other animal in its custody, or over which he has or will have control, to any person, firm, establishment or manufacturer using animals for experimental purposes, or to any person, school, university, research laboratory, or experimental station, to be used for educational demonstration, medical, scientific, or experimental purposes of any nature. The acceptance of this by-law being a condition of a gift, it shall be binding on the present organization and shall be incorporated in any subsequent by-laws at any time hereafter offered by any reorganization of the Society in the name and for the purposes of this Society".

These same rules apply to the Monterey County Pound; so fear not.

Now Voyager

Mr. Glenn Berry, long time Carmel area resident, has recently returned from an around-the-world cruise in 22 months. His friends may find him "at home" in Carmel and "at work" in the Carmel Art Shop.

Glorianne Graduates

Glorianne Dodd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dodd, of Pebble Beach, was graduated from Castilleja School in Palo Alto. She was vice president of the senior class and a senior member of the House Council. She plans to enter Pacific University in the fall.

Greeting to Bob Hope

In reply to a birthday greeting from "Pop" Smith of Carmel, Bob Hope sent a personal message of thanks. He ruefully admitted that he would rather have ignored it but too many friends and well-wishers insisted on reminding him that he was 60.

We, too, would like to congratulate Mr. Hope and remind him that, according to our mathematics he has only reached the age of "forever young".

Honored

Army Major Charles H. Whitledge, son of Mrs. Marguerite Whitledge, Carmel, has received the Army Commendation Medal while attending the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va.

Major Whitledge received the award for his performance during his recent assignment as chief of the CONUS assignment section, Transportation Branch, Office of Personnel Operations, The Pentagon, Washington, D. C.

Carmel Foundation

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie C. Deck will show colored moving pictures entitled, The Waters of the Euphrates and Inside Middle America at The Carmel Foundation Town House at two identical performances 1:30 and 3 p.m., 10 July. Tea will be served at 4 p.m. The two performances have been made necessary because of the numbers of persons wishing to see the pictures. Those wishing to avoid crowding should attend the first showing.

The Art Exhibit for the month of July will be Mexican Impressions painted by Mrs. Phyllis Calley during her recent stay there working with the Each One-Teach One group.

Young Artist

Joan Johnson, graduate of the University of Michigan and a John Cunningham student will have her first one man show in Carmel at the Redding Gallery, between 5th and 6th on San Carlos. The preview will be from 2 to 6 p.m., Sunday, 8 July.

The Hootnanny

The Canterbury Association of Saint James Church, Monterey will be holding auditions for a "hootnanny" at the Monterey U.S.O., 19 July, starting at 6 p.m. The performance will be given 2 August.

For those of you who have not hooted a nanny lately, it refers to an evening of folk music and song performed enthusiastically if, somewhat casually.

THE FISHERMAN

By B. F. GLADDING

Drifting Does It!

The trouble with dropping anchors is that a fisherman promptly commits himself to one spot. And the trouble with trolling is that it marks the opposite extreme. There's a happy medium — drifting! It won't work on windy days, but whenever there's only a gentle breeze never pass up the opportunity. The double advantage of drift fishing is that you constantly cover new water, and so slowly that you can use methods that trolling speeds rule out.

Hook a live minnow through both lips and add just enough sinker to take it down. Let it "swim" slowly and naturally just off the bottom. Or cast a nightcrawler or crawfish ahead of the boat, picking it up and recasting each time the boat comes over it. Jigging is another drift-fishing stunt. Snap on a metal spoon or wobbler and let it straight down until it hits bottom. Reel in a few feet, then "pump" with a steady rhythm, alternately lifting the lure sharply and then dropping the rod tip to let it flutter back down. Fish usually belt a jigged spoon while it's dropping on a slack line — so stand ready to set the hooks at all times.

A strike is the signal to drop anchor for a spell, for one of the big objectives of drift fishing is to find a hidden hot spot. Stick with it for as long as it continues to pay off, then resume drifting. A few pulls of the oars from time to time is all that's needed to keep you on course.
